

ABSTRACT

In one embodiment, an image forming device includes a storage device for storing data. A storage access manager is configured to coordinate access to the storage device from a plurality of client devices that communicate with the storage device using at least one uncoordinating communication protocol.